On Tuesday

Fans of Chuck Manatt, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee and then national finance chairman for Gary Hart, are urging him to go home to California and run for governor against incumbent George Deukmejian, who is expected to seek a third term in 1990. He has a California base in his law firm, Manatt, Phelps, Rothenberg & Evans.

Doug Flutie, who piled up yards and legends at Boston College and then lesser yards and smaller legends with the Chicago Bears, is about to find his fame shaved a bit in his hometown of Natick, Mass. Flutie Pass, the street named in his honor, is about to lose 220 yards to a shopping center expansion. That's about what happened when Doug played at College Park an era ago, when Boomer Esiason passed the Terrapins to a last-minute victory.

Last Friday was a tough day for Redskin owner Jack Kent Cooke's new young bride, Susan Elizabeth Martin. That was Susan Elizabeth outraged and screaming, "I can't go out like this," at the Watergate beauty salon Friday afternoon prior to the opening game. She was hysterical about her hair while hubby and other loyal fans were pleased about the Skins' victory over Pittsburgh that evening.

Alexander Haig, who may rival Bob Dole as the resident wit among the Republican presidential prospects, offered this advice at a picnic in New Hampshire the other day: "Shake a leg for Haig. Don't be vague. Ask for Haig. Beware of Dole and Dole, it's only watered-down pineapple juice. Haig and Haig is the Real McCoy. Jack, don't let anybody get tackled behind the lines. Take no Pat answers. And above all, don't get Bush-whacked." Does he want to be president, or Johnny Carson?

G. Gordon Liddy is still capitalizing on Watergate fame. Not only does he command top dollar on the talk circuit and have his own TV talk show, but his film career is booming. He's been cast in a new film, "Pardon for Pilman," a black comedy. Shooting is scheduled to begin after the first of the year. As mentioned in this space last week, he plays an Afghan general in still another upcoming film. You know how tough the Afghans are.

The Duke, the Massachusetts governor who Playgirl Magazine says is one of the 10 sexiest men anywhere, will find out what Hollywood really thinks next week when actress Sally Field hosts a dinner for Mike Dukakis. She's one of the celebrities the Dukakis camp wants to sign up.

John Dukakis, ex-actor ("Jaws II" and "The Guyana Tragedy"), aide to Sen. John Kerry and stepson of the Duke, has signed up someone on his own. He married Lisa Thurmond, a hotel sales executive, Sunday in Ipswich, Mass. In the true spirit of a national campaign, the 200 guests, including actor LeVar Burton, who was an usher in the wedding, were assigned to tables named for flowers, such as rose for Iowa, and purple lilac for New Hampshire. Placards were etched with the official state flowers. No state was left out. Some states have the same flowers — the rose for New York and North Dakota, the apple blossom for Michigan and Arkansas — but everything smelled fairly presidential. The groom will be working on his stepdad's presidential campaign in the South.

Wedding bells will ring for author Susan Cheever, daughter of author John, and San Francisco Examiner columnist Warren Hinckle after the first of the year, and after his campaign for mayor. He doesn't like the present mayor, as you might imagine, and he's taking leave from the paper to campaign with eye patch and basset hound. That's how impartial they are in San Francisco.

Don't be surprised if Helga O takes her successful jewelry boutique to that other coast. The wife of Alex Orfila, the former ambassador to the Organization of American States, is checking out a location in the newly renovated Beverly Wilshire Hotel in Beverly Hills.
